

Riders of the Week

November 28 – December 2

Joella Summerlot has chosen Romario Brown for Rider of the Week. His favorite movie is Facing the Giants, and he loves to watch sports in his free time. His role model is Erik Thomas because Romario says he, “motivates people to do better and gives people hope when they have nothing left.” When Romario graduates, he would like to become a coach because he wants to help kids become great athletes and great men. Joella Summerlot chose Romario because she says, “Romario is respectful, polite, hard-working, and loves being a Rider. He greets me every morning with a smile and always helps his fellow peers. He is hard-working on the field, in the classroom, and with his studies. Romario is definitely someone on campus who embodies ‘Rider Spirit.’”

Both Coach Randolph and Robbie Low have chosen Ana Guerrero for Rider of the Week. Ana's role model is her mother because she is hard working and never gives up. Ana says her mother is respectful and she always encourages Ana to try her best. When Ana graduates, she plans on becoming an LVN (Licensed Vocational Nurse) because she wants to take care of patients and help them get well. She says this job involves feeding, bathing, dressing, and taking patients' vital signs, all tasks she is willing to take on. For fun, Ana loves to spend time with family and read. Mrs. Low says, “Ana is always smiling and positive. She is a fabulous student who is not satisfied to ‘just pass.’ She pushes herself to excel. She is considerate and helpful. She is a sweet young lady whose attitude and smile always make my day better!” Coach Randolph agrees. He says, “Ana is always very respectful and has a smile on her face. Ana is an extremely detailed student who takes tremendous pride in her work. In my class she does an outstanding job of helping others and displays tremendous leadership qualities.”
