

Riders of the Week

February 27 – March 3

Stefany Moreno

Stefany Moreno has been chosen for Rider of the Week by April Bloys. Stefany's favorite book is Cleopatra's Daughter by Michelle Moran. Her role model is her father because he works hard and always makes sure his children are doing their best. Mrs. Bloys chose Stefany because, "she always comes to class with a fabulous smile and an excellent attitude. She gives 100% effort in all of her work. Stefany is a very involved student. She is on the dance team, participates in UIL competitions, and is on yearbook staff. When she is asked to help with something, she gets the job done. She is the perfect example of Riders being responsible and respectful."

Josh Clark has also been chosen for Rider of the Week. His Role models are his parents because he says, "They both individually had obstacles in their lives but persevered and graduated from college. I am fortunate that they found each other and waited until they had a steady living and the ability to be self-sufficient before having me. I am truly amazed at the determination and drive my parents had." In his spare time, he says, "I like to do pretty much anything that has to be with being outside in general, such as throwing a football, shooting my bow. I also like to play video games, code, and become more knowledgeable about anything. What I really love to do most is to help people. It can be as simple as making them laugh or helping someone feel better as they go through a rough time." Mrs. Bloys chose Josh because he is a very conscientious student who always tries his best. He goes out of his way to improve his skills in math by doing extra practice. He is a pleasure to have in class and always tries to help others.

Josh Clark

Center Middle School

R³ = Roughriders are Respectful and Responsible