

Riders of the Week

December 14 – December 18, 2015

Linda Camacho

Anita Williams has chosen Linda Camacho for Rider of the Week. Linda loves to draw, and enjoys the silence while doing so. She also enjoys reading Lemony Snicket's Series of Unfortunate Events, even though, she says, "they're for children." Linda's role model is her mother because despite "all she's been through, she still manages to raise four kids." When Linda grows up, she hopes to be a nurse. She loves the idea of helping people. Realistically, she says, "I've heard it only takes two years in college." Linda's teacher says, "She exemplifies a positive attitude toward school. Linda knows that her bright future lies in getting a good education and it shows in her work habits. He can be counted on to listen to explanations, work well in class, and get her assignments done on time. Also, Linda has a great sense of humor and works well with others. She is very knowledgeable and she is an excellent student. Linda is a student who has a bright future ahead of her."

Anita Williams has also chosen Eh Doe Soe for Rider of the Week. His favorite movie is The Hunger Games and he loves to draw, play games and watch movies. His role model is his mother because she told Eh Doe Soe to be himself. When he grows up, he hopes to be an art teacher because he loves art, and it helps him with his life when he is stressed. Mrs. Williams says Eh Doe Soe "displays many outstanding qualities which have earned him Rider of the Week. He is a student who works exceptionally hard in the classroom. He also has displayed many admirable qualities outside the classroom. Eh's enthusiasm is infectious to all those he comes into contact with. He brings a smile to my face each and every day and at the end of each day, he seeks me out to say, 'Bye, Mrs. Williams, have a great day!' Eh is a true example of what a Rider of the Week should be."
